Subsequently, invited speakers made brief presentation on their topics.

Dr. H.R. Prabuddha, IFS. IWST, Bengaluru made brief presentation Sustainability, Certification and Legality in Wood Products: World and Indian Scenario. In his presentation he highlighted about the various certification systems practiced across the globe and challenges associated with certification in India. For instance, FSC certification scheme consists of 10 principles, 55 criteria's and 200 indicators related to SFM. Similarly, Network for Certification and Conservation of Forests (NCCF), a NGO from India has come up with 59 criteria and 239 indicators for SFM which is endorsed by the PEFC. Adhering to too many Criteria and Indicators (C&I) makes certification a very complex process and it becomes difficult to implement in Indian conditions.

Dr. H.D. Kulkarni, Vice President Plantation (Retd.), ITC Ltd., made a detailed presentation on "Relevance of sustainability certification for agri-wood in India and shared his firsthand experience in dealing with certification agencies when he was working in ITC ltd. He also stressed upon creation of Indian system of certification for wood produced from the agricultural lands and plantations.

Ms. ShilpaNaryal, Head Sustainability-South East Asia, Intertek did presentation on "Sustainable development for greener supply chain in the Global Value Chains". In her presentation she talked about the complexity associated with the concept sustainability and existing certification systems like FSC and PEFC. She also urged for creation of Indian system of certification for the benefit of farmers and wood based industry.

Dr. Shiv S. In his presentation he gave a framework for creation of Indian certification system.

Dr. ManmohanYada, Professor, IIFM., Bhopal observed that to ease forest certification process in India, already IIFM (Indian Institute of Forest Management), Bhopal has come up with 8 criteria and 37 indicators for SFM through Bhopal India Process. The same C&I developed by IIFM have been adopted in the National Working Plan Code, 2014 and they are being implemented in most of the forest divisions across the country. Hence, it would be desirable come up with Indian framework of forest certification based on C&I developed by the IIFM.

Dr. SuneeshBuxy, IGF.,MoEF&CC., complemented the IWST for organizing this webinar and briefed about the initiatives taken by the ministry in respect of promotion of agro-forestry in the country. He also informed that the out of this webinar should be sent to ministry for further necessary action in respect of forest and wood certification in India.

Both Sh. Sh. SajjanBhajanka, and Sh. JikeshThakkar observed that, there is to develop Indian framework of certification for the certification of forests and Agri-wood in India to provide certified wood to the industries.

All the panelists agreed to come up with simple and cost effective Indian framework for certification of forests and Agri-wood would help the farmers and industry to adopt the certification system in India.
